

MICHAEL REID'S
NORTHERN BEACHES

Ben Waters

A stylized, layered landscape painting. The scene is composed of several horizontal bands of color and texture. At the top, a pale, overcast sky is rendered in soft, horizontal strokes of light blue and grey. Below the sky, a wide river flows horizontally across the middle ground, its surface depicted with a pattern of small, light blue dots. The river is flanked by rolling hills and mountains. The hills are painted in various shades of green, from vibrant emerald to muted sage, with some areas showing diagonal hatching or cross-hatching patterns. In the foreground, several tall, thin reeds with large, flat, umbrella-like tops are scattered across the landscape. The reeds have long, thin stems and their tops are rendered in shades of yellow, green, and brown. The overall style is reminiscent of traditional East Asian ink wash painting, but with a more vibrant and layered color palette. The composition is balanced and serene, capturing a moment of quiet reflection in nature.
